*We've found over the past twenty-five years that scripting, verbal organization, outlining, and practice are important keys to success. One or all of these home study tools helps you greatly to prepare for and maximize both your performance at the course and ultimately in the examination room; passing is the bottom line, and we can help you best when you are at your best. Remember, "The will to win is less important than the will to prepare to win," and these materials provide a substantial and often decisive competitive advantage in helping you prepare to win.
